Lisbon:

Old and new utopias of urbanism

CoordinationJosé Manuel Simões(IGOT); José Reis Correia (IGOT)

Lisbon is a millennial city, and for that reason throughout its history numerous events happened that indelibly and differently marked the evolution and the urban matrix of the city. Many urbanistic or simply architectural projects have been developed and implemented: some, in the continuity of the dominant political and social visions; others, looking for ruptures of models and aesthetics. Many have been realized and helped to build the physical, social and economic identity of the city. Some, despite their creative trait, were no more than proposals, hovering like "utopias" in the imaginary of the city.
